

Unvarying Merit Explains the Growing Popularity of ROYAL PILSEN

THAT quality counts is strikingly evidenced in the case of Royal Pilsen. In the short time it has been on the market it has become the most popular light beer in the city.

Only one grade of malt and hops—the best—is employed in producing Royal Pilsen, and the importance of cleanliness in brewing and thoroughness in aging is fully recognized and provided for. These account for the distinguishing excellence, fine flavor, and healthfulness of Royal Pilsen.

Beers of doubtful quality cost YOU as much as Royal Pilsen. Order it for home use, and when you're "down town" use no other.

WHITE SOX NOW LEAD

Americans Bat Out Pitchers Ruelbach and Pfeister.

WALSH VICTIM OF MISPLAYS

Big Twirler Would Have Handled the Cubs Well Had the Men Behind Him Performed Their Tasks Without Errors—Dr. White Finishes Game With Much Credit.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Three games for the White Sox! Once more Comiskey's champions turned the trick on the West Side headliners, when they whipped them soundly to-day by a score of 8 to 6. The Sox batted like fiends, but fielded badly. Had they been free from errors the Cubs' count would have been small. On the other hand, the Cubs fielded through the terrible nine innings without a mistake, but their hits were too scarce. Big Ed Walsh was in grand form for six innings, and with better support would have sent the Cubs' batters out in a hurry. However, in the seventh inning it looked as though he had blown up, and "Doc" White was rushed to the rescue in a hurry.

The Sox handled the Cubs' pitchers disgracefully. Ed Ruelbach was driven from the pitching hill in the tenth inning after being swatted terribly. Pfeister relieved him, and in the next inning he, too, was driven to the timber. Giant Overall then came in from behind the club house and finished the game with much credit.

It was one of the slowest games of the post season. Two hours and forty minutes were consumed in playing the nine innings. Much of the time was taken up by Walsh waiting the ball.

Pack Packed with Fans. The national commission gave out the statement that the paid attendance was 22,500, and no one doubted it. They were seated everywhere. All the stands and bleachers were packed. Thousands clung on the edges, and the men bleachers were overhanging with humanity.

Isbell was a tower of strength with the stick. The lanky Swede tore off four crashing doubles, and, besides scoring three runs, hit home in three more. Robe and Davis were also there with the goods. Davis nipping off two doubles.

The Sox scored one run in the first inning on Hahn's single, Jones' sacrifice, Isbell's double and Davis' two-sacker. The Cubs came right back and on two singles, a sacrifice, a batter hit, and two errors by Isbell, chased three tallies across the plate.

The score stood this way until the third, when the Sox evened up the count. Isbell started it off with his second double and scored on Davis' charger into the crowd. Pfeister then went to pitch and started by hitting Donohue. Tinker's error gave Donohue a life. Davis scored.

White Sox Clinch Game.

The Cubs went out in order and then the Sox clinched the game in their half of the fourth by tallying four runs. Walsh walked as a starter, but was forced by Hahn. Jones singled and Isbell tore off his third two-bagger, scoring Hahn and sending Jones to third. Davis duplicated this hit, scoring Jones and Isbell. Overall replaced Pfeister and he immediately walked Robe. Donohue's double scored Davis, but Schulte turned Dougherty's fly into a double play and ended the inning.

The Cubs were stiff going, however, and made one in their half of the inning on Robe's error, a base on balls, a stolen base, and a wild pitch. In the sixth the Sox scored their last tally on Isbell's fourth two-bagger and Robe's double. The Cubs came with a rush in the last half of the sixth and sent in two runs. Walsh grew wild and after two men were out passed both Overall and Hoffman. A failure to open his arms at second ended the bag, and then Schulte doubled, scoring both runners. Chance went out on an infield grounder and ended the round.

After Steinfield had doubled in the seventh, White replaced Walsh in the box, and the doctor allowed only one scratch hit and the Cubs were not able to score thereafter.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

The game comes near setting up a new record for two-baggers. Of the nineteen hits made by both clubs, nine were for two bases. The South Siders connected for six of them.

A testimonial dance and reception in honor of the White Sox and Cubs, under the auspices of the Inter-city Baseball Association, will be held at the Coliseum on the evening of October 20.

The Sox failed to back their reputation as the "Hitless Wonders." They copied twelve big hits off the Cub fingers, and drove Big Ed Ruelbach and Southpaw Pfeister to the barn. Nothing hitless about that!

Big Overall, easy at first, grew invincible as the game went on, and when the finish came he was pitching so successfully that he looked to have been a wild winner had he only mounted the hurling hill in the initial round.

Gates were closed at 1:30 o'clock, and 10,000 frenzied fans were left on the outside. It was the biggest crowd of the series, and the rivalry of the South Side and West Side fans in rooting drowned every other sound on the grounds.

After Davis and Donohue had retired Evers and Kling on grounders in the sixth, the Nationals' chances of scoring looked slim. But the uncertainty of the game then asserted itself. Overall and Hoffman worked Walsh for free transportation to first and Robe failed to properly handle Steinfield's hard drive, filling the bases. Then Steinfield drove Overall and Hoffman with a stinging double to center.

That the Cubs stand up well under fire is evidenced by the fact that, although their opponents clouted the ball hard and often, they played an errorless game. The Sox were charged with five misplays, some of which were costly.

Robe, the idol of the South Side fans, who scored the first two victories for the Sox by his batting, again acquitted himself with glory. He smacked out two doubles and a single. When there is a hit needed he is mighty apt to deliver the goods.

Harry White, the Washington boy, wreaked a partial vengeance for his previous defeat at the hands of Murphy's Spuds. He had the satisfaction of driving a desperate rally that threatened to put the game on the right side of the Cub's ledger.

The advance sale of seats for to-morrow's game indicates that the largest crowd of the series will be in attendance. Sunday is always a big baseball day in Chicago. With perfect playing conditions, it is estimated that the attendance figures will hover around 25,000.

It was a wild game and brimming over with excitement. Inning after inning the teams fought like madmen, each striving to get the advantage that should finally bring it out a winner, and give the victors the edge on the series, and the chance to finish the whole thing with the game of Sunday. When the finish came and the Sox were hailed as victors, the uproar raised by the South Side miriads was beyond all description or imagination.

The announcement that the deciding game would be played in Chicago was a blow to other cities that made big offers for the event. Spokane, with its offer of $15,000, and Denver, with its offer of $10,000, were thrown into the shade by the receipt of a telegram from Harry Herrmann, president of the National Commission, to the effect that Fresno, Cal., the home of Manager Chance, would guarantee $25,000, 60,000 spectators, and sunshine for the final game.

The Cubs scored three runs in the second inning, making but two singles, one of them a scratch safety to the infield. In this session, Walsh was the victim of Isbell's hit to Davis, who tossed to Isbell, forcing Chance. In his anxiety to complete a double play, the Sox's second sacker threw past Donohue into the hands of the Cubs. A moment later Donohue dropped a throw ball and Steinfield counted.

As Isbell stepped in the batter's box in the sixth inning he was given a tremendous ovation by the White Sox adherents. The bald-pated athlete had already batted out two doubles, and was importuned to connect for another. He caught on the bases full, Steinfield square on the nose, and when the ball was fielded back to the infield the ancient one was perched on second. He scored on Davis' suicide and Robe's single, and the Sox doubled in a game is sure going some.

Neither team has won a game on its home grounds. The two pennant winners line up on the South Side grounds, the home of the Sox, and it is up to the Cubs to turn the trick. It is probable that Altrick and Sullivan and Brown and Kling will be the opposing batteries. Nick and Mondak have been pitted against each other twice, and each has scored a victory. Jones' side-sweeper is going good now, and wants another crack at the three-fingered one, and it is likely that Pfeister will once again be the victim of the Sox's administration. Ruelbach and Pfeister to-day, Brown is the logical choice for to-morrow.

BIG LEAGUE RECORDS.

Figures of Interest for Fans Who Have Followed the Sport.

The longest extra-inning game in the National League during the past season was fifteen innings. There were forty-eight games that went beyond the nine-inning limit. Four were of fifteen innings. There were eleven games of sixteen, four of seventeen, seven of eighteen, four of nineteen, and twenty of ten innings.

Seven tie games were played, four going over nine innings.

Lush, of Philadelphia, and Eason, of Brooklyn, pitched one no-hit game each.

There were eleven games in which one of the teams made only one hit, fifteen two-hit games, and forty-six three-hit games.

In two games one of the clubs made twenty-two hits; in four, nineteen hits; in four, eighteen hits, and the statistics and the statistics of the games were numerous.

All National League records for the number of shut-out games were broken. In 141 games one of the teams was shut out, and there were 101 and a year before only 87. This indicates growing strength of the pitchers. Boston had the whitewash coat applied oftener, the number being 36.

Five, during the year, Pitcher Duglesy, of Philadelphia, held the opposing team down to five hits and lost four of the games.

All told, there were fifty-five extra-inning games in the American League during the season just closed. One was of twenty-four innings, the record; one of fifteen, eleven of twelve, ten of eleven, eleven, and twenty-eight of ten.

Twenty is the highest number of runs made in an American League game this year, and that record was made in a six-inning game by New York off New York. What would have happened but for darkness never will be known.

In one American League game twenty-three hits were made by one team; in two, twenty-two hits; in four, eighteen hits, and in three games twenty hits.

Eleven one-hit games, fifteen two-hit games, and forty three-hit games formed the American League low-hitting record for 1906.

Twelve games were played, four going for extra innings.

The American League shut-out games numbered 124. St. Louis was blanked twenty-seven times.

Four favorites lost. The attendance was about 25,000.

TALPA WINS STALL STAKE.

Delivers Calm and Jameson Escape Injury in Collision.

Lexington, Ky., Oct. 13.—With but two races on the programme the local meeting came to an end to-day, attended by a large crowd. The Stall Stake, the feature of the card, went to Talpa, owned by the Oakland Stock Farm, of Louisville, N. Y. Talpa had little trouble in winning the stake in straight heats, after dropping the first to Dr. Chase. In the second, third, and fourth heats she kept in the lead from start to finish.

This race was marred by an accident that nearly cost David Cahill and Carlos Jameson, drivers of Sister Collette and Kampona, respectively, their lives. A collision occurred, both drivers being thrown out. Kampona ran horses was seriously injured.

Ruby Lay won the 2:30 class racing race in featureless contest. The 2:30 class trotting event was declared off, as two of the four entries were drawn.

FLAG RUSH PROVES FIERCE.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 13.—Walking on the heads and shoulders of his fellow-classmen as they battled with freshmen around Freshman Oak, a sophomore succeeded in reaching the pole to which the 100 meter was tied, climbed the slippery banner and tore down the flag, ending one of the fiercest class rushes ever seen here. So closely jammed together were the freshmen that they could not raise their arms to pull down the sophomore, who trod over their heads to victory.

When referee "Indian" Schulte announced his decision, the victorious sophomore classmen charged the freshmen to the trees; and as the youngsters climbed the oaks and elms of the campus they were almost denuded by the victors. Those who refused to climb were dragged bodily to the botanical ponds and thrown into the muddy waters. Upper classmen and tutors unable to establish their identity to the satisfaction of the victors, also had to strike out for the skyline via the back route.

A thousand girls watched the rush and listened to proposals of marriage forced from captive freshmen by their conquerors.

Hundreds of hats were stolen from spectators by the students, and scores of freshmen ran bruised and with clothes torn through the streets after the rush. None of the participants sustained serious injury.

BILLIARDISTS TO MEET.

Hoppe and Schaefer to Shoot the Ivories, Beginning Wednesday.

New York, Oct. 12.—For the first time in many years New York is to have the honor of acting as host and of being entertained this winter by the greatest of billiard experts. Hoppe, who upset the form tables by defeating Maurice Vignaux for
